

New Web Site

After all the fun and games we've been having over the last few months, we decided to revamp the site somewhat.

As a result of the problems we had in March, certain aspects of the old site were broken. Additionally, the old site was somewhat out-of-date and had suffered some comment spamming, so we decided on a re-design.

The new site is basically the same as the old site, except it now runs on the Joomla! platform (a fork of Mambo). Joomla! is a more active project which is currently used by several of our clients. This will allow us to build more functionality into the site.

Because we've got better things to do than sit around splicing up images in Photoshop, we've just gone with a standard free template for now. Hence the lack of blue sky. More of a haze, really. We'll fix the look later.

Anyway, there are bound to be several bits and pieces that are no longer relevant or simply incorrect. We apologise if there's any confusion. Please let us know if there's anything we need to fix, and feel free to contact us if you have any questions.